APPENDIX A

2023

Use of Force Interactions

Introduction:

In 2023, the Ministry of the Solicitor General significantly updated the mandatory Use of Force Report. The modernized Use of Force Report contains new data points and detail to assist with informing training, policy and to facilitate analysis. It includes additional data such as:

- information/factors influencing the officer's response
- the full range of officer responses
- subject-specific information
- reviewer information

Due to the change in the report, comparison of statistics from previous years will be difficult due to the data point capture variability. Team reporting is permitted by all officers present at an interaction when the same level of force is applied by all. In previous years, only the Emergency Response Unit (ERU) were permitted to submit team reports. The benefit to team reporting is that it reduces the duplication of incidents. The drawback is that it limits some data, particularly information relating to the officer. Information related to years of service, rank, division worked, etc. are captured by the team report author.

From the Ministry of the Solicitor General's Use of Force Race-Based Data Technical Report, "Police officers face situations where they may use force during their duties to ensure their own safety and that of the community. The parameters governing the use of force by police officers are contained in the Criminal Code, other federal and provincial legislation and regulations, the common law, and the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. The broad principles governing the use of force by police may be summarized as follows:

Broad Principles:

1. Police officers may use force in the execution of duty only if permitted by statute or the common law. More particularly, the statutory or common law authority on which an officer relies when using force must apply to the particular duty that the officer is carrying out.
2. Even when the use of force may be authorized to carry out a particular type of duty, a police officer does not possess an unrestricted right to use force. The lawful use of force by police is constrained by the principles of necessity, proportionality, and reasonableness.
3. An officer's use of force may be excessive if the officer did not have the authority to use force, or otherwise if it violates the principles of proportionality, necessity, and/or reasonableness. Under necessity, an officer may not use force if there are reasonable non-violent tactical options available to the officer, by which their lawful objective would likely be accomplished.
4. "De-escalation" is a term that refers to non-use-of-force tactical options that a police officer may use when confronting a violent or non-compliant individual, or for use-of-force options designed to obtain compliance on the part of a subject.
5. Police officers possess a measure of reasonable discretion in determining whether force is required, and if so, to what degree. Police officers engage in dangerous work, and, on occasion, must act quickly in emergencies. Assessments regarding the use of force need not be based on a "standard of perfection".

1. Recommendation:

That the Board receive this report pursuant to Use of Force Policy No. P-010.

2. Purpose:

As per the Board's Use of Force Policy No. P-010, the 2023 annual use of force statistics are contained within this report and provided to the Board for their information.

3. History:

In 2020, the Anti-Racism Act (2017) mandated police services to collect data on the perceived race of individuals involved in use of force incidents. To comply with this, all Ontario Police Agencies are obligated to electronically submit standardized Use of Force Reports for centralized collection by the Ministry of the Solicitor General. For further clarification the decision to have officers report on perceived race is intentional. By having officers report in this manner it is hoped that trends in an officer's perception of race leading up to the moment they used force can be captured and analyzed for trends and bias.

The Ontario Use of Force report offers the following information that may inform one's perception of race:

"The perception of another person's race is based on information that can be readily observed, such as skin colour, hair texture, facial features, and other information that may be used to inform assumptions about a person's racial background such as accent, dress, surname, etc. If a person is perceived to be of mixed race, the officer should choose the race category that, in their view, the person most resembles.

The following factors may inform your perception of a subject's race:

- Subject's name or other identifying information (e.g., information from CPIC, dispatch, witness, prior knowledge of subject)
- Audio-visual cues prior to, or during the interaction (e.g., subject's skin colour, hair texture, facial features, subject attire, subject's voice/accent)
- Knowledge of the neighbourhood composition."

See Appendix 1: Ontario Government Table for Valid Race Categories

Reporting:

The report was updated significantly in 2023 from the prior year forms. The modernized Use of Force Report contains new data points to inform training policy and facilitate analysis. It includes additional data such as:

- information/factors influencing the officer's response;
- the full range of officer responses;
- subject-specific information; and
- reviewer information

As such, the statistics will vary over previous years due to the data point capture variability. Team reporting is now allowed by all officers when the same level of force is applied by all. The increase in team reports will impact duplication of incidents.

A member of a police force shall submit a report to the chief of police whenever the member:

- a) draws a handgun in the presence of a member of the public (which includes a suspect or arrested person);
- b) points a firearm at a person;
- c) discharges a firearm;
- d) uses a weapon that is not a firearm on another person;
- e) draws and displays a conducted energy weapon (demonstrated Force Presence mode) to a person with the intention of achieving compliance;
- f) points a conducted energy weapon at a person;
- g) discharges a conducted energy weapon; or
- h) uses force on another person, including through the use of a horse or a dog that results in an injury requiring the services of a physician, nurse or paramedic and the member is aware that the injury required such services before the member goes off-duty

See Appendix 2: Ontario Use of Force Report (2023)

Use of Force Report Submissions and Review:

The officer/designate who used or displayed a force option, shall complete the report and forward it to their supervisor prior to going off duty. The supervisor shall review the report, flag any issues, and when complete, add their name and forward the report to the divisional commander. The divisional commander shall review the report, flag any issues, and when complete, add their name and forward it to the Use of Force analyst (Use of Force Sergeant) for final review. The report is then submitted electronically to the Ministry of the Solicitor General.

Any allegation of serious injury are reported to the Special Investigations Unit (SIU) for investigation. The SIU is a civilian agency that investigates matters involving law enforcement where someone dies, is seriously injured, alleges sexual assault or has a firearm discharged at them. In addition, any member of the public who feels they have been subjected to unnecessary force, may file a complaint with the Law Enforcement Complaints Agency (previously known as the OIPRD). The Hamilton Police Professional Standards Branch will also be involved in these instances.

Prior to 2023, the Hamilton Police Service (HPS) kept record of all use of force reports submitted to the Ministry of the Solicitor General (SOLGEN) and used the internal records for annual reporting. These two streams of record keeping is a caveat when comparing historical years between SOLGEN reporting and historical HPS annual reports. In 2023, the HPS was involved in a pilot initiative that allowed the Service to access its own data through a portal. This pilot has improved data quality and assisted in reconciling any discrepancies between internal records and the SOLGEN data. HPS will use the SOLGEN data for annual reporting moving forward.

Click the below link to access the current data as provided by the SOLGEN. Preliminary data for 2023 is included as Appendix 5 and SOLGEN final data will be released in the summer of 2024.

4. Legislation, Regulations, Common Law, and the Charter:

Citizenship Responsibilities

In Canada, rights come with responsibilities. These include:

- Obeying the law — One of Canada’s founding principles is the rule of law. Individuals and governments are regulated by laws and not by arbitrary actions. No person or group is above the law.

Criminal Code of Canada

S.25 - A peace officer who is authorized by law to do anything in the administration or enforcement of the law is, if he acts on reasonable grounds, justified in doing what he is required or authorized to do and in using as much force as is necessary for that purpose. Protects officer from civil liability if mistakes of fact, not mistake of law, made.

S.26 – Every one authorized by law to use force is criminally responsible for excess use thereof according to the nature and quality of the act that constitutes excess. This is where the Professional Standards Branch and/or the Special Investigations Unit would investigate force used by police officers.

S.27 – Every one is justified in using as much force as is reasonably necessary to prevent the commission of an offence...that would be likely to cause immediate and serious injury to the person or property of anyone.

S.34 – Every one who is unlawfully assaulted without having provoked the assault is justified in repelling force by force if the force he uses is not intended to cause death or grievous bodily harm and is no more than is necessary to enable him to defend himself.

Common Law

Police have a common law duty to preserve peace, prevent crime, and protect life and property.

Ontario Provincial Offences Act

S.146(1) – Every police officer is, if he or she acts on reasonable and probable grounds, justified in using as much force as is necessary to do what the officer is required or authorized by law to do.

Ontario Police Services Act (1990)

Duties of police officer

42 (1) The duties of a police officer include,

- (a) preserving the peace;
- (b) preventing crimes and other offences and providing assistance and encouragement to other persons in their prevention;
- (c) assisting victims of crime;
- (d) apprehending criminals and other offenders and others who may lawfully be taken into custody;
- (e) laying charges and participating in prosecutions;
- (f) executing warrants that are to be executed by police officers and performing related duties;
- (g) performing the lawful duties that the chief of police assigns;
- (h) in the case of a municipal police force and in the case of an agreement under section 10 (agreement for provision of police services by O.P.P.), enforcing municipal by-laws;
- (i) completing the prescribed training.

Regulation 926: Equipment and Use of Force

Outlines the equipment that officers are permitted to carry as well as mandated training requirements for use of force and firearms. It also mandates when officers shall report use of force.

Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms – Protection against cruel and unusual punishment

The Charter protects everyone from cruel and unusual punishment. This includes torture, excessive or abusive use of force by law enforcement officials.

Decision-making in the Moment: Why use Force?

The decision for a police officer to use force is not taken lightly. A police officer must defend against all real and perceived threats and assaults as they cannot lose access to the weapons and tools that they carry, nor can they allow the public to be assaulted. Verbal de-escalation is a critical component and is used regularly in the daily interactions with the public. In fact, verbal de-escalation usually negates the need for use of force during an interaction. However, there is no way of recording when or how de-escalation prevented a use of force interaction.

The reasons that a police officer must use force include:

- Control – subject behaviour
- Defend – against attacks
- Protect – self, partner, public
- Effect – lawful arrest
- Prevent – commission or continuation of offence

De-escalation: Verbal and non-verbal strategies to reduce the intensity of conflict/crisis with the intent of gaining compliance without applying force or reducing the amount of force required. De-escalation requires removing the threat (intent, means, opportunity) and could result in deploying the CEW or using lethal force (i.e., active shooter). Sometimes officers will choose to use force to stop a threat from escalating, as the officer recognizes that if the threat continues, it will necessitate a higher level of force. Officers may also consider that if the threat continues to evolve, lower levels of force may not be available as options moving forward.

Community Engagement and Consultation

Hamilton Police recognizes that genuine and consistent engagement with diverse communities, and particularly those communities who are disproportionately affected by use of force, is an important part of improving trust and strengthening relationships. As part of our ongoing commitment to transparency and accountability, Hamilton Police welcome honest conversations with all communities as a pathway to enhance our understanding of unique perspectives and lived experiences. Through these important conversations, we can respond and adapt to the diverse needs of the communities we serve.

Training:

In summer 2023, the Ministry of the Solicitor General notified all Ontario police agencies of the approved Ontario Public-Police Interactions Training Aid to replace the 2004 Ontario Use of Force Model. The new aid was the result of changes based on court decisions and inquests.

The Training Aid is designed to assist police officers and the public to understand why and in what manner an officer may respond during an interaction. This model prioritizes cooperative police-public interactions, grounded in de-escalation strategies.

Ontario Public-Police Interaction Training Aid (2023):

The Training Aid was developed by the Ontario Police College (OPC). Conflict prevention and de-escalation envelop the entire model to reinforce the two primary goals in any interaction.

The aid is for all interactions, not just for use of force. The guiding principles come from federal legislation, the Charter, the new Community Safety and Policing Act as well as the Special Investigations Unit.

The officer begins their assessment of the situation immediately upon receiving the call. The Assess-Plan-Act is central to conflict prevention and de-escalation. The officer applies Assess-Plan-Act to all of the below considerations:

- Situation & Subject Considerations (cooperative, passive resistant, active resistant, assaultive, serious bodily harm or death)
- Officer Considerations, Strategic Considerations
- Verbal and Non-verbal communication, non-force options
- Physical control options
- Intermediate weapon options
- Lethal force
- Conflict prevention & De-escalation: Assess, Plan, Act

See Appendix 3: Ontario Public-Police Interaction Training Aid (2023)

Recruit Training:

Prior to attending the Ontario Police College (OPC)

- One day of pre-OPC use of force training focusing on equipment, de-escalation, and use of force options

While attending the Ontario Police College

- Approximately 13 weeks learning about the Use of Force Model, use of force options (excluding the Conducted Energy Weapon), officer safety, defensive tactics, firearms, de-escalation (time, distance, communication, retreat)

Post Ontario Police College (in house with Hamilton Police)

- One week of use of force, learning about de-escalation, communication, articulation, judgement scenarios, and Conducted Energy Weapon (CEW) new-user training
- Adaptation of new Ontario Public-Police Interactions Training Aid (replacing the 2004 Ontario Use of Force Model)
- One week of Crisis Intervention Training to better understand and de-escalate persons suffering from mental health crises

Current officers:

- Adaptation of new 2023 Use of Force Report
- Annual training on use of force judgement scenarios and de-escalation to re-qualify
- Training on Active Bystander for Law Enforcement (ABLE) to provide officers with strategies and tactics to prevent misconduct, reduce officer mistakes and promote health and wellness

Anti-Racism Training: Throughout 2023, the EDI, Hate Crime and Community Engagement Unit focused training sessions to build cultural competency and foster situational awareness with a community-centred approach aimed at bringing diverse perspectives to Hamilton Police Service membership. Beginning in 2023, annual Block Training has integrated Equity Diversity and Inclusion (EDI) training through experiential learning. Officers used cultural competency and an EDI lens in real-time use of force scenarios, which reflect Hamilton's rich diversity of communities, perspectives, and positionalities. This scenario-based learning was complemented by classroom learning that emphasized the impact of unconscious bias, micro-aggressions, and community perceptions of police.

In addition, the EDI, Hate Crime, and Community Engagement Unit provided EDI fundamentals and cultural competency training to new hires including sworn Officers, Special Constables, Cadets, Communications staff and volunteers. Topics included understanding anti-racism, 2SLGBTQIA terminology, and unconscious bias.

In 2023, the Unit facilitated 11 EDI Workshops open for all members of Hamilton Police Service, both sworn and civilian, to build their capacity on a number of pertinent issues related to community policing. These workshops delved into community-centred subjects, including dismantling anti-Black Racism, addressing anti-2SLGBTQIA discrimination, exploring the tenets of Sikhism, and understanding both visible and invisible disabilities.

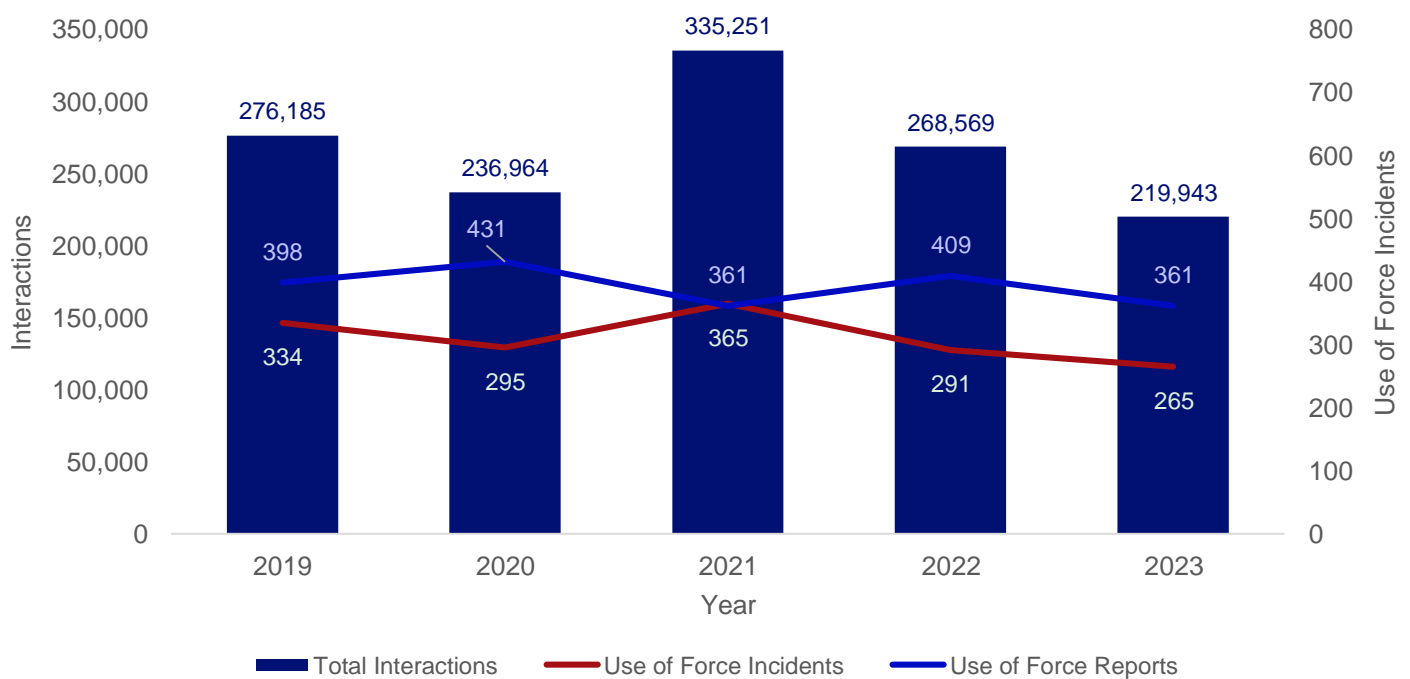

Upcoming Legislation: On April 1, 2024, the Community Safety and Policing Act (CSPA) came into effect, replacing the Police Services Act established in 1990. The new act contains legislative requirements that reflect the previous act, containing training components with regard to use of force and de-escalation. Moving forward, the CSPA requires police officers in Ontario to successfully complete training in Mental Health Crisis Response, as well as Thematic Training on the following topics: human rights, systemic racism, the diverse multicultural and multiracial nature of Ontario society, as well as rights and cultures of First Nation, Metis, and Inuit Peoples.

5. Analysis: Use of Force Incidents, Reports and Public Interactions:

Hamilton Police had 219,943 public interactions in 2023. Public interactions are estimated using the total volume of calls for service (both public and officer generated), Provincial Offence Notices (e.g. traffic stops, liquor tickets), RIDE lanes, and arrests. Increased call volume demand has limited the availability of patrol officers to complete proactive work such as traffic stops. In 2023, there were 265 use of force incidents that generated 361 use of force reports submitted to SOLGEN. Out of the 219,943 public interactions, 265 incidents required the use of force, equating to less than 1 percent of public interactions (0.12%). The total use of force incidents compared to public interactions has trended upwards from the prior year (2022 0.11% to 2023 0.12%); however, the total use of force incidents has decreased by 8.9%.

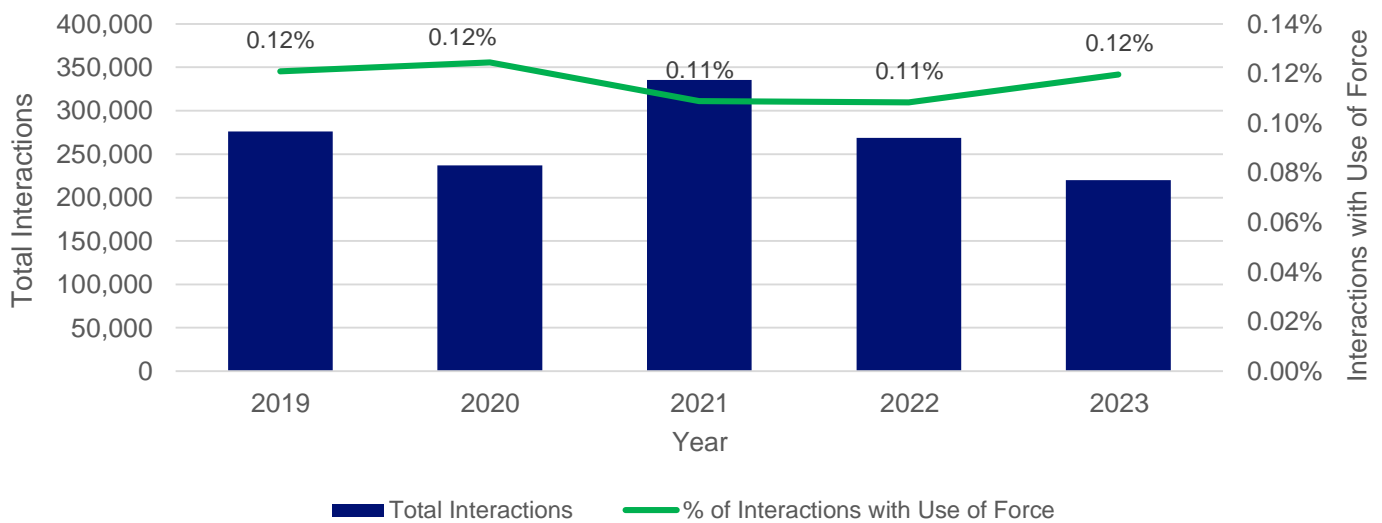

The difference between total incidents and total use of force reports is due to the Ministry’s reporting requirements. Prior to 2023, only the Emergency Response Unit were permitted to submit one report per incident while other units such as front line patrol had to submit one report for each officer attending each incident. In 2023, the Ministry adjusted the reporting requirements to allow one report to be submitted by all officers displaying the same level of force that did not result in an injury (e.g. firearm or CEW drawn/pointed, restraint) and a separate report by the officer that applied force that results in an injury requiring medical intervention (for example, CEW discharge, mental health apprehension or physical injury). The change in reporting requirements makes year over year comparisons analytically challenging for analyzing reports versus incidents.

Last year saw an increase in the number of use of force incidents reported per 100,000 interactions. Although this rate increased compared to 2022, the number of use of force incidents decreased as did the number of interactions with the public.

6. Uniform Officers vs. Plain Clothes Officers vs. Tactical Officers:

A majority of officers (79%) that are involved in use of force incidents are in uniform, while a small minority (2%) are in plain clothes. Tactical officers make up the remaining 19%. These officers wear uniforms but are generally involved in relatively more use of force incidents due to the type of calls they are involved in (warrant executions, high-risk situations).

7. Daytime vs. Nighttime

The use of force incidents were categorized by time of day into the categories daytime and nighttime. Daytime are incidents falling between the hours of 0600 and 1800. In reviewing the 2023 Use of Force Data, there were slightly more incidents occurring at nighttime (54%) than during the daytime.

8. Call Types:

An officer's involvement in an incident may occur either from self-initiated work (e.g. traffic stop) or by a citizen-generated call for service (e.g. 911 call). The majority of officer involvements stem from citizen-generated calls for service (80%). Within the use of force report, there are varying call types that are available for officers to categorize the type that best describes the nature of incident. The top three call types where a use of force report was generated were weapon(s), executing warrant, and person in crisis. The top three call types where use of force was used comprised of 51% of all use of force incidents (Table 1).

Table 1: Type of Call Resulting in Use of Force

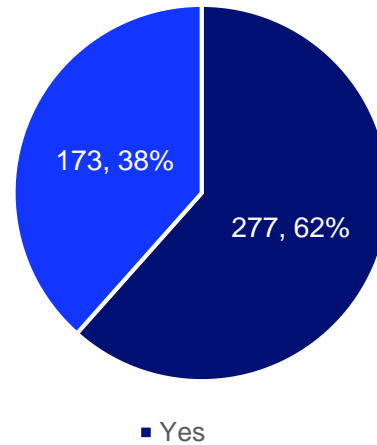

Call Type	Incidents	% of Total
Weapon(s)	69	25%
Executing Warrant	42	15%
Person in Crisis	30	11%
Violent Crime (non-Intimate Partner Violence)	23	8%
Disturbance	18	6%
Intimate Partner Violence (Intimate Partner Violence)/Dispute	11	4%
Humane Destruction of Animal	19	7%
Remaining Call Types*	65	23%

See Appendix 4: Incident Type as per Use of Force Report

9. Incidents with Armed Subjects:

An officer's decision to exercise use of force may be used to protect self, protect public, and/or to effect an officer's duties (e.g. arrest, apprehension). The involvement of a subject perceived with a weapon is a predictor of use of force, given the threat to both self and public. Within the 2023 data, one in four use of force incidents were because of a weapons call type and 62% of subjects were perceived to have access to a weapon (Figure 5). This information can come from any number of sources, including a 911 call (witness or victim), prior involvement with the police, or through investigation.

The most common perceived weapon type for subjects were firearms. The presence of firearms continues to be a concern for officer safety. Firearm calls present a risk of serious bodily harm or death. The appropriate response to a firearms call is with the officer's firearm. This limits lower use of force and other de-escalation options. With an edged-weapon call, the appropriate first response is the officer's firearm. Less lethal options can be considered only if there are enough officers present and the situation warrants this approach.

Officer perception is impacted by the information they receive from the dispatcher. Other considerations are the subject's behaviour as well as prior historical interactions. If a subject fails to show their hands, the officer may perceive that the subject is holding a weapon.

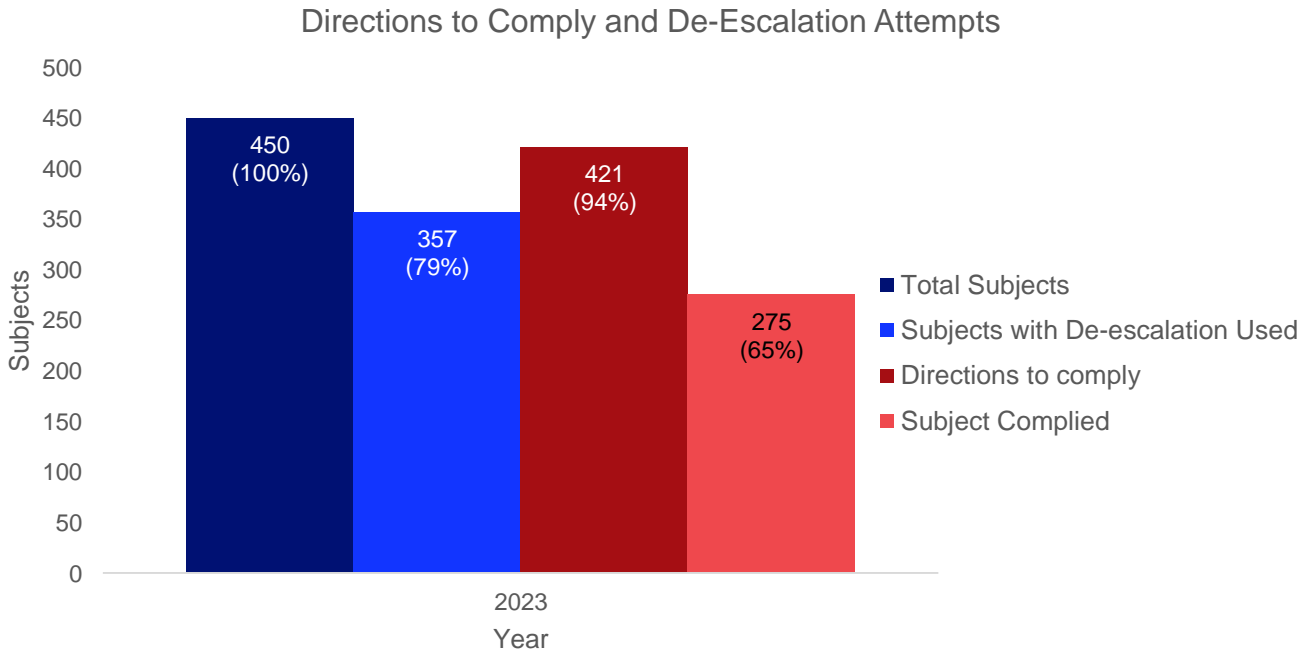

In 2023, HPS experienced 1,071 calls for service that were dispatched as a weapons call, a 9% increase from the 5-year average. The weapon types (chart below) are weapons that were found on the subject or within reach of the subject. Subjects with weapons have increased from 191 in 2022 to 301 in 2023. Subjects with firearms have increased from 50 in 2022 to 138 in 2023. Subjects with edged weapons increased from 75 in 2022 to 77 in 2023. Other weapons included wood planks, tools, metal poles, shovels, sticks, rocks, etc.

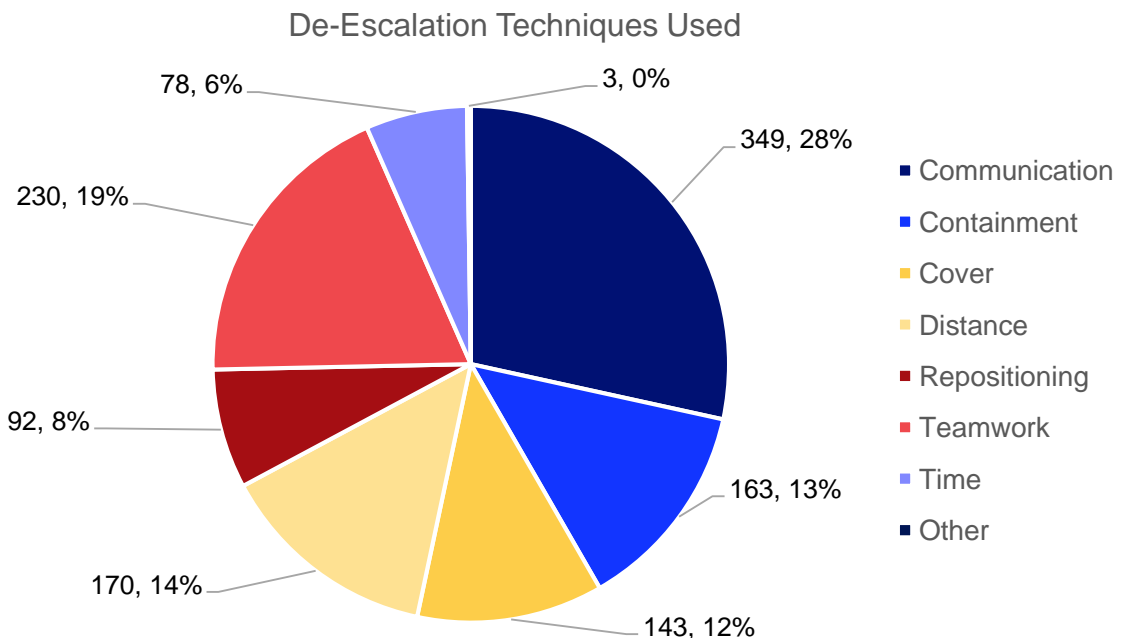

10. Use of Force Options:

In most instances (421 subjects, or 94%), officers provided direction for the subject to comply during a use of force incident. Of that number, 275 subjects (or 65%) followed direction (either a CEW or firearm was drawn or pointed). The remaining 146 subjects (or 35%) did not comply with the officer's direction and force had to be applied.

The following chart shows the number of subjects where de-escalation attempts were used. There are some instances where de-escalation techniques were not used (warrant execution).

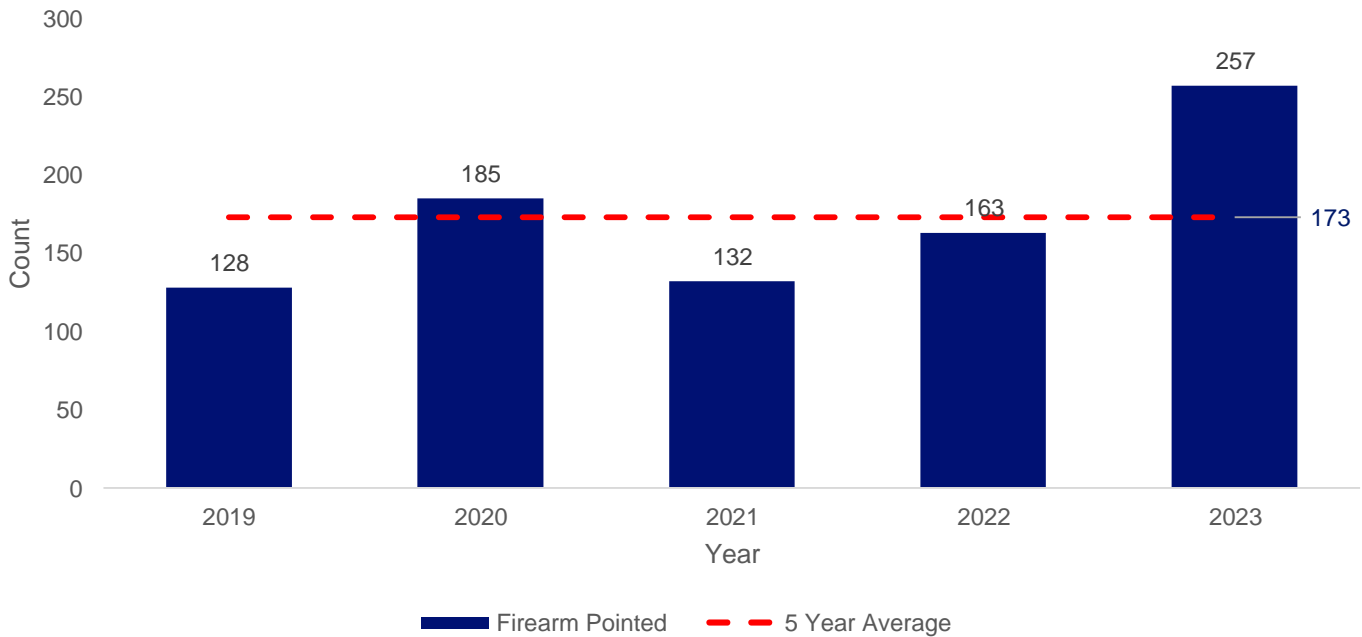

The following chart shows the de-escalation techniques used. For a single incident, multiple techniques are often used.

Last year 257 subjects had a firearm pointed at them, an increase of 58% compared to 2022 (Figure 6). It is also above the 5-year average of 173 subjects. Pointing a firearm is a method of compliance and used when there is a threat of serious bodily harm or death to the public or the responding officers. It means that a firearm has not been discharged (fired). This increase in the firearm pointed category and related decrease in firearm discharge category illustrates officers providing direction as part of their overall de-escalation strategy, to gain compliance and prevent an escalation of force.

In 2023, there were 11 firearm discharges by officers (figure 7). 10 of these discharges were to end the suffering of a severely injured animal, such as a deer struck by a vehicle. There was a 58% decrease in the number of discharges compared to 2022 and the number of discharges was below the 5-year average of 22 (figure 7).

The use of the Conducted Energy Weapon (CEW) is an effective, less-lethal use of force option. In the majority of cases where a CEW is accessed, the mere presence before a discharge has demonstrated efficacy in de-escalating high-risk situations.

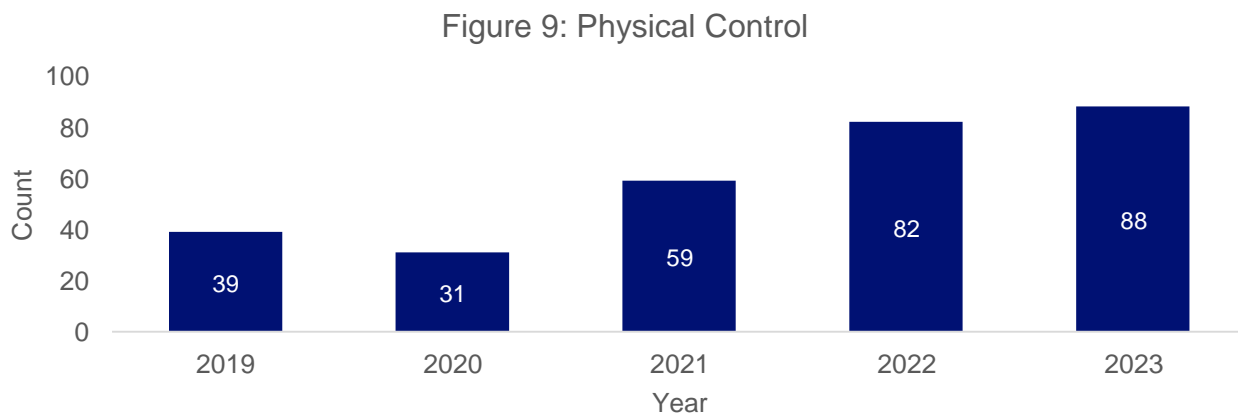

In 2023, the CEW was drawn and displayed with the intention of achieving compliance 82 times.

Physical control involves the application of physical force on a subject. Physical control covers a broad range of options such as:

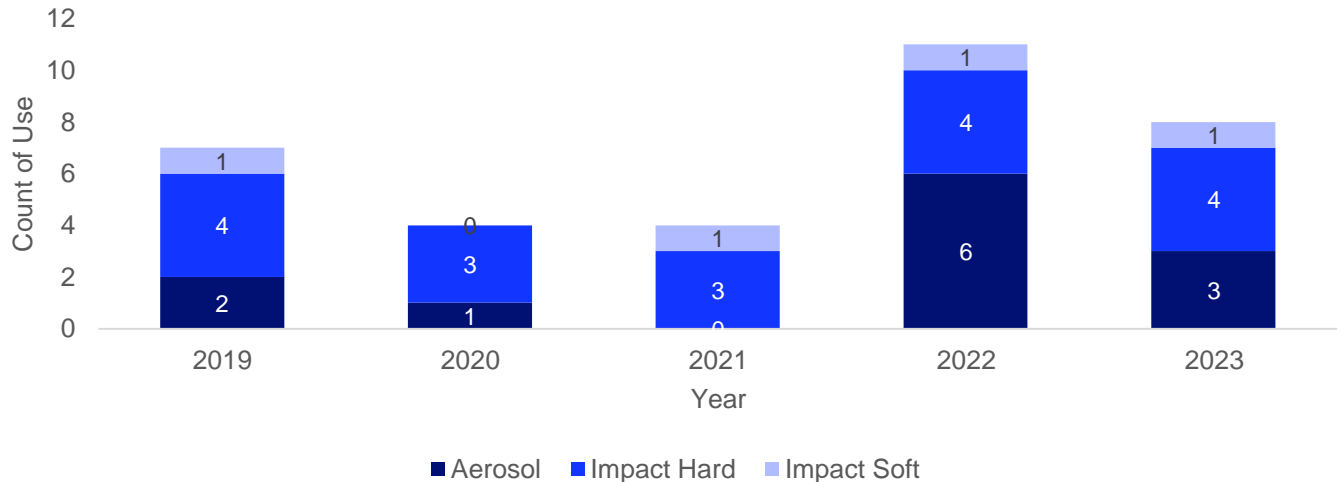

- Empty hands “soft” (hands on, holding, gripping, wrist control, or prying arms from underneath subject)
- Empty hands “hard” (punching, striking, and grounding).

Some physical control techniques do not require the submission of a use of force form unless higher degrees of force have been used or if medical attention was required. In these cases, the submitting officer will need to complete the form with all the levels of force and additional required fields. In 2023, the form no longer included an option for empty hands “soft,” which makes the comparison of years prior to 2023 not in line with the current methodology (Figure 9). Moving forward, officers will select from options that would be considered physical control, such as grounding, pinning, joint lock, escorting etc.

Last year, there were eight instances of the use of impact and aerosol weapons, a decrease of 27% compared to 2022 (Figure 10). These uses of force options are minimal compared to other use of force options. Impact hard would be a strike with the baton whereas impact soft would be using the baton to assist in getting a subject's arm out from underneath them. However, this is still slightly above the average (6.8) number of reported uses over the past 5 years.

There was 1 injury to a subject due to a canine bite, with the Canine Unit participating in 5 incidents.

11. Officer Injuries vs Subject Injuries:

Subjects with a use of force injury is rare and account for a small percentage of cases. In 2023, 72.6% of the subjects did not have any physical contact applied as part of the interaction, limiting the risk of injury. However, injuries can range from minor injuries that can be treated with first aid on scene, to significant care at a medical facility. In 2023, there were 450 subjects involved within the 263 use of force incidents. Of these, 35 subjects were injured (5.9%) and 12 officers were injured (1.4%). The vast majority of subject medical intervention involved probe removal from the CEW and/or psychiatric assessment (Figure 11).

12. Location of UOF Incidents by Ward

The Use of Force Incidents map shows the rate of use of force incidents compared to the number of occurrences in the same Ward.

Ward 13 has a relatively high number of use of force incidents when compared to its number of occurrences. This is due to the majority of incidents (69%) being the humane destruction of an injured animal.

Two incidents occurred outside of Hamilton, resulting in reports not reflected below.

13. Subject Race Data:

The Anti-Racism Act (ARA), 2017 outlines the initiatives to eliminate systemic racism, advance racial equity, and measure the strategy's progress across Public Sector Organizations (PSOs). A key component to the ARA is to identify disparities between racialized groups through data collection. In 2018, Ontario's Data Standards for the Identification and Monitoring of Systemic Racism were passed by the Order in Council and articulated the data standards necessary to monitor racial disparities across PSOs. Police Services are required through O. Reg. 267/18 to capture and report de-identified data involving subject race using the use of force report submissions.

In 2020, police services began to submit use of force incidents on a new report that required an officer to select a subject's perceived race (up to three subjects). In 2023, the report was altered to accommodate the reporting of use of force on more than three subjects. The selection of a subject's race is based on the perception of the officer involved in an encounter. Officers do not ask the race of the individual or find alternate ways to determine the race of the individual or individuals involved. The determination is based solely on the officer's perception of race at the time of the incident. An officer's perception is beneficial in the identification and monitoring of racial disproportions and disparities. The collection of perception-based race is part of the ARA Data Standards and the rationale is provided in Standard 40. A continued limitation in the form is the inability to provide multiple racial categories for a subject.

The Ontario Data Standards mandate that organizations must calculate racial disproportionalities and disparities to determine differences in outcome. The disparity index is a proportional comparison between the outcome (i.e.

use of force) within one racial group to another racial group (typically white). A disproportionality index is an over or under representation of a racial group in a program / outcome compared to their representation in a benchmark population. Hamilton Police follow the guidance of Appendix D in the Data Standards (Using Statistics Canada Data Sets for Benchmarking) as part of its analysis and selects the following two benchmark populations: the 2021 Hamilton Census by Race and the racial composition of those who are arrested/apprehended. A racial disproportionality/disparity can be interpreted as the following:

- If the division of population A against population B is one, then it suggests that the index is equal and no disproportionality/disparity
- Values lower than 0.5 suggest an under-representation and values over 1.5 and 3.0 suggest over-representation and gross-over representation, respectively.

It's important to understand that disproportionality or disparity doesn't always mean discrimination and that the Service examine what is causing these differences. According to the Anti-Racism Data Standards (Standard 32), just because a disparity index is greater or less than 1 doesn't necessarily mean there are unfair differences in a service, program, or function. They also state that racial disproportionality or disparities alone might not prove systemic racial inequalities.

The analysis in this report is basic and meets the minimum standards set by the Anti-Racism Data Standards. Hamilton Police Service is dedicated to fair policing for everyone in the community and is working on a Race and Identity Based Data Strategy. This strategy will include data collection, detailed analysis, and planning actions with the community.

While the police do not interact with all members within the community, the Census population serves as a starting benchmark population to identify whether disproportionalities or disparities exist.

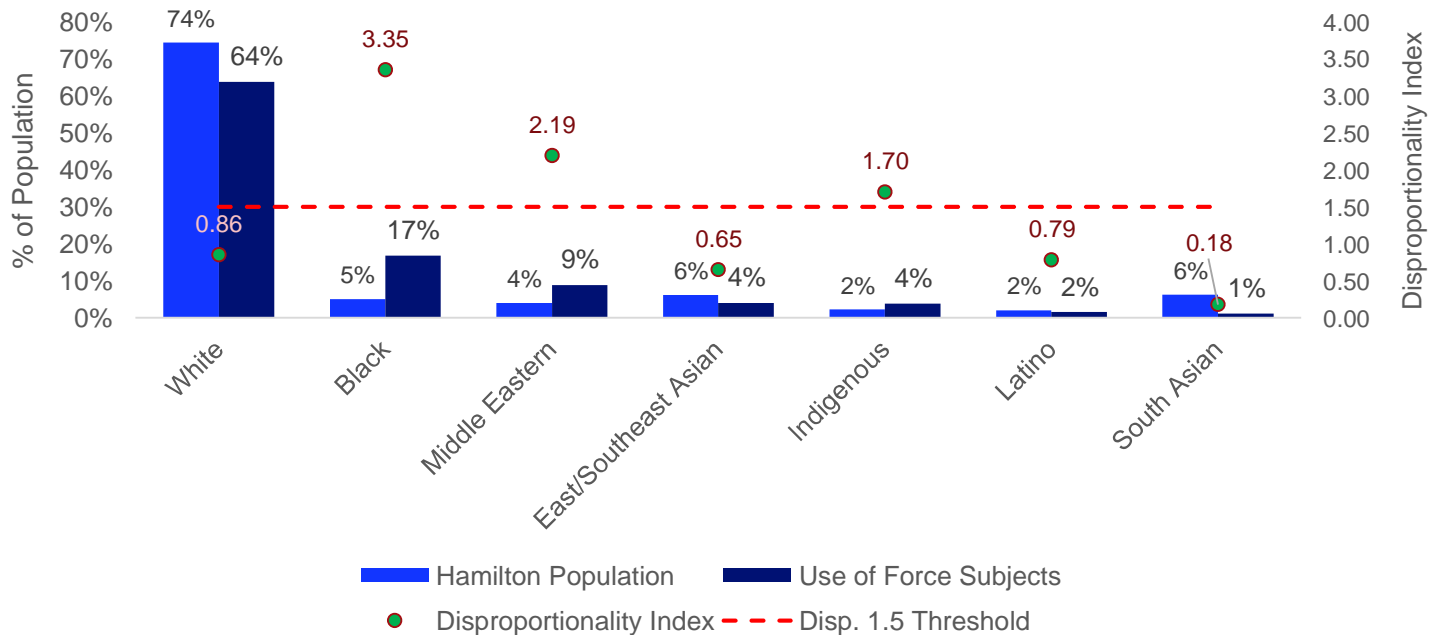

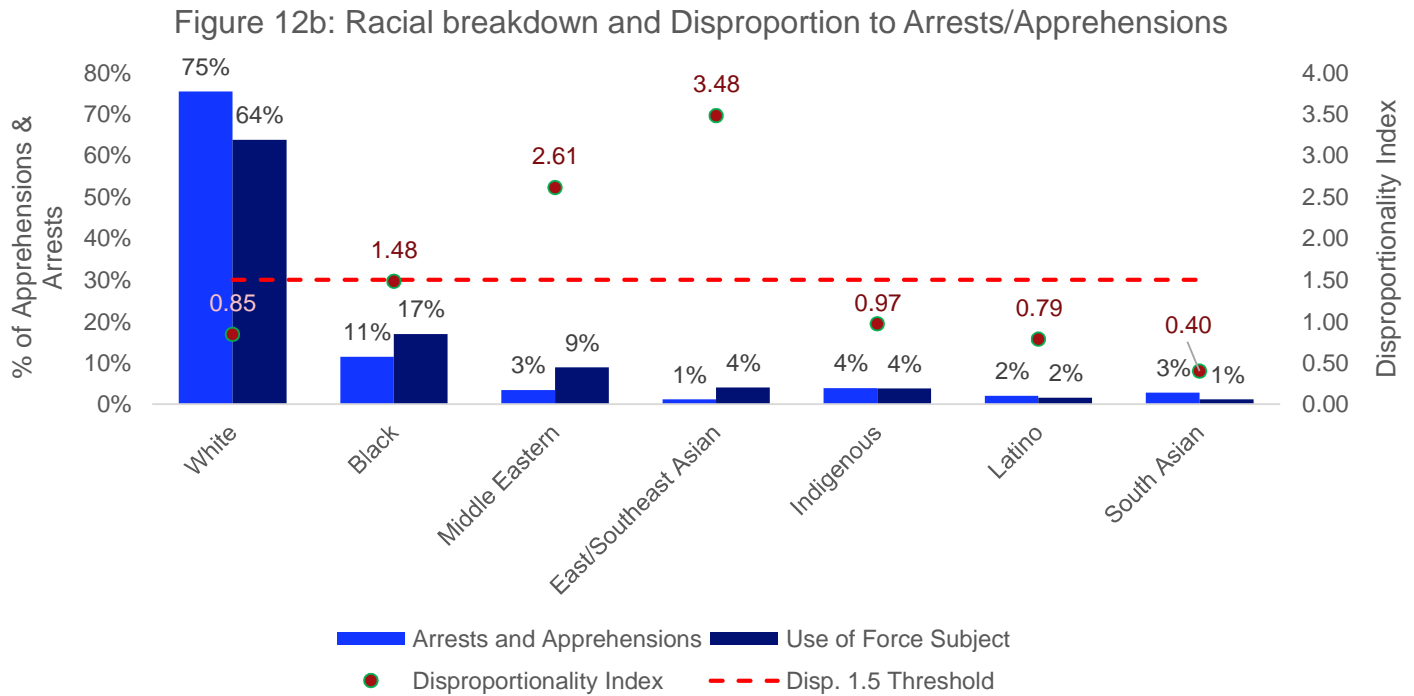

Figure 12b uses the population of subjects that are either arrested or apprehended as the benchmark population. This population are people that the Hamilton Police Service actually interacted with in 2023, unlike the Census population.

Last year was the first year that the Hamilton Police released the disproportionalities using both the Census and arrests/apprehensions as benchmarks. In comparing the data from the previous year, there are the following notable changes.

The interpretation for the following racial categories should be exercised with caution as the total use of force forms per category are less than 25 subjects: East / Southeast Asian, Indigenous, Latino, and South Asian.

Changes in use of force against the Census population benchmark

Race	Change from 2022	Number of Subjects	Total Census Population

Middle Eastern	+71.5%	40	22,855 (4.0%)

Race	Change from 2022	Number of Subjects	Total Census Population
Black	-1.6%	76	28,415 (5.0%)

Changes in use of force against the arrest and apprehension population benchmark

Race	Change from 2022	Number of Use of Force Subjects	Total Apprehensions/Arrests
Indigenous	+70.7%	17	355 (4%)
Middle Eastern	+69.7%	40	311 (3%)

Race	Change from 2022	Number of Use of Force Subjects	Total Apprehensions/Arrests
Black	-6.0%	76	1,040 (11%)

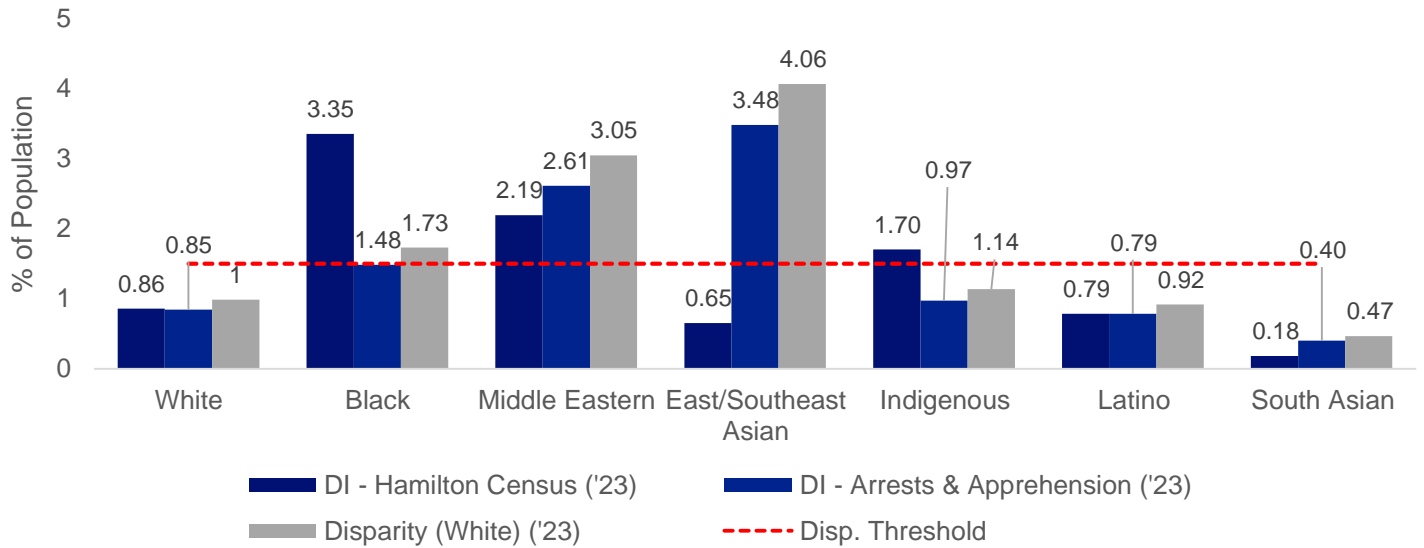

Figure 12c combines the disproportionalities for the Census population and arrest/apprehension populations alongside a disparity index. The disparity index is calculated by comparing the arrest/apprehension disproportionality index of a race against the White arrest/apprehension disproportionality index. For example, the Black arrest/apprehension disproportionality index value of 1.48 when compared to the equivalent value for White (0.85) results in a disparity index of 1.73 (i.e. $1.48/0.85 = 1.73$). The grey dotted line shows the threshold that identifies whether a disproportionality and/or a disparity exists. If a value is above the line, it indicates that a disproportionality and/or a disparity exists.

In 2023, disparities exist for the following racialized groups when compared to the White population:

Race	Disparity Index
Black	1.73
Middle Eastern	3.05
East/Southeast Asian*	4.06

* Note: the East/Southeast Asian race category contains less than 25 use of force forms. Caution should be exercised.

Understanding the root cause of disproportionality or disparity should be done carefully due to limited contextual information. Most police interactions (80%) with community members are due to calls from citizens. There may be systemic factors that cause different rates of interaction between racial groups, such as how often citizens call the police and the community's trust or distrust in the police.

There are four main factors that researchers are using to explain what can affect the disparity and disproportionality indexes between race groups and benchmark populations (see below): officer bias, institutional and cultural practices, person's choices/actions, and social/demographic factors. Understanding these drivers of disparity is a vital step in the collection of race and identity-based data as it provides areas of focus for police services and the community, with the ultimate goal of improving fairness and equity in policing.

Race and Identity Based Data Strategy:

Hamilton Police is committed to the promotion of equity, fairness and non-discriminatory policing in Hamilton. Our data collection strategy focuses on understanding how police and community interactions affect racial disparities. By identifying the causes of these imbalances, we aim to address and reduce systemic issues. We cannot fully understand or change what we do not measure. Our Race and Identity-Based Data (RIBD) Strategy will provide us with the ability to identify and address systemic racism in our policies and practices. It will also allow us to identify ways we can better support our members in their delivery of fair and equitable service.

Hamilton Police have created a Community Advisory Panel (CAP) to advise on strategies on how to approach race and identity-based data collection, contextualization and action planning. The focus of the group will be on the drivers of disparity that are within the scope of the police (policies, practices and officer bias). The selection committee began their work in February of 2024 and was comprised of two civilian employees, one academic partner, and three community members from communities overrepresented in police use of force. The process involved two steps: the committee first reviewed applications and resumes, advancing 16 individuals to the interview stage. Following structured interviews, 10 candidates were selected as CAP members.

CAP members have lived experience, are passionate about data, social justice and community service.

The critical work with the CAP will begin in June 2024 with a goal of drafting a preliminary Race and Identity Based Data strategy by December 2024.

14. Conclusions:

The number of both use of force incidents and reports are decreasing from the prior year. While the volume of incidents represents a small proportion of total interactions with the public, Hamilton Police acknowledge the impact that use of force has. As an organization, we will continue to ensure the safety of the community and our membership, maintaining accountability and transparency. We are committed to upholding the highest standards of training and the application of use of force, in compliance with the Police Service Board's policy and the Anti Racism Act Data Standards of 2018.

Appendix 5 – Use of Force, Line by Line

The data on the following pages is extracted from the Ministry of Solicitor General (SOLGEN) data portal, available in-year to Police Services. Row level data has been extracted for 2023 and prepared for the public in advance of the Ministry of SOLGEN's 2023 data release. Officers are required to submit a form under the conditions outlined in s.14.5 (see report for details).

In 2023, SOLGEN has permitted team reports for all members that use the same level of force (i.e. all members drawing firearms). For readability, the data has been transformed to select columns similar to HPS prior data releases from the SOLGEN data and include all occurrence related info on one line, denoting each subject with a '[S] + number'. For example, if there were 2 subjects who were white carrying a gun and knife, respectively, the line will read: [S1] - White, [S2] - White for the subject race and [S1] - gun, [S2] - knife for the subject weapon used.

Readers are cautioned with using the following caveats while reading and interpreting the data:

- the same incident may have multiple reports, limiting the ability to identify the true number of unique subjects
- the same occurrence may have multiple incidents, spanning locations (i.e. homicide investigation)
- prior year comparison is challenging due to changes to the reporting mechanisms made by SOLGEN
- variables may provide some context to the report; however, true context may not be extractable from data points found within the form. This may limit the reader's ability to understand the complex police-subject relationship in relation to the use of force model (balancing public safety, officer safety, and subject safety).
